

Too many Abads in gov't? Solons feel ill at ease

By Gil C. Cabasagano Jr.

A "KAMANG-ANAK INC." is emerging in the new administration and it is not the Aquino or Cojuangco family, lawmakers yesterday said.

Lawyer Mark Lee, refers to certain relatives of the late President Corason Aquino, the lawmaker's mother, who became influential and were linked to controversies during her administration in 1986-1992.

This time, however, lawmakers are feeling ill at ease over having too many TOO MANY ARE

Harnessing people power in fight against corruption

By Dennis M. Arroyo
Contributor

"We relied the spirit of people power during the campaign. Let it take us to good and effective governance."

—President Aquino, June 30, 2010, inaugural address

HOW THEN can people power be harnessed to promote good governance? The people can be involved with COMMENTARY groups and can individuals that have been effective in fighting corruption.

I previously did research for the World Bank on the best practices around Asia. Filipino NGOs are among the leaders in the field, but we can learn from our neighbors.

It would be best for civil society to work with the government in applying the cutting edge to battle corruption: guarding the money, ensuring performance and leveraging information.

Groups can express their priorities for the budget, monitor its crafting, analyze its details, and put its pros and cons to lawmakers' noses. The NGO Action Aid in Nepal sentenced the national budget passed by the king in July 2003 without a single parliament. Its estimate was that more than half of development expenditure would not

Third boat in 'balangay' epic voyage unveiled

SETUP BY GUY—A group of engineers seeking to revive the ancient Filipino migration unveiled on Friday a third wooden boat prepared after the previous vessel called the "Balangay."

The "Sana Tini-Tini" will join two other balangays—"Unang ang Lahi" (First of the Race) and "Mabuhay ang Bayan" (Endurance of the Nation) in Zamboanga City—for an expedition across Southeast Asia and then to China.

"We will leave for Zamboanga on Wednesday and rendezvous with the two other boats," Jit Valdes, leader of the expedition, said yesterday.

He said the three boats would leave Zamboanga on July 28.

Valdes said the third boat was named after the boat builders belonging to the team, a woodworker named

Review of Trillanes

coup case draws fire

Senators hit Palace meddling in judiciary, Senate

By Christine O. Avendaño
and Christian V. Esguerra

TWO VETERAN senators yesterday said President Aquino's order to review the coup d'état case of Sen. Antonio Trillanes IV was tantamount to meddling in the judiciary and the Senate.

But Senators Joker Arroyo and Eduardo Angara were careful not to directly criticize Mr. Aquino for ordering the review, with Arroyo blaming Palace advisers for giving the Chief Executive "bad advice" and Angara saying he believed Mr. Aquino was a "well-meaning" person.

Mr. Aquino has said Trillanes may have been a victim of injustice for having been charged with participating in a coup d'état in connection with his role in the 2003 Oplan Andok military. The detained former Navy officer has been favored from attending the Senate session since he was elected senator in 2007.

Mr. Aquino's directive coincided with a tight battle for the Senate presidency if allowed to attend the session. Trillanes is expected to vote for Mr. Aquino's ally and Liberal Party mate, Sen. Francis Pangilinan.

Both Pangilinan and rival Sen. Manuel Villar Jr. of the Nacionalista Party have been unable to get the majority support of 13 senators, with only a week to go before the new Congress opens on July 26.

Whitewash of Trillanes' role in coup plot feared

By Armando Doronila

PRESIDENT AQUINO showed his hand in trying to break the impasse over the election of a new Senate President when he ordered the justice department to review the case against Sen. Antonio Trillanes IV.

Mr. Aquino said state prosecutors could have erred in filing the case against Trillanes and that the former Navy officer, detained military commander for years, may have been a victim of injustice.

It was not clear what agency prompted Mr. Aquino to order the review.

Metro water woes traced to dry Angat

By Rex T. Obando

IF ONLY RAINS pour in Bulacan around Metro Manila.

Water concessionaires Maynilad Water Services Inc. and Manila Water Co. are facing a dwindling share of water from Angat Dam, which is hardly getting enough replenishment from the recent rains after a long dry spell.

Maynilad has resorted to water rationing. Water disruptions in its network started on July 15 and were expected to continue all July 23.

Manila Water said there was no reduction yet on the supply and pressure in the Angat Dam company's area.

Officials of the water service providers said they wished it would rain in Angat Dam in the region.

Typhoon "Banyan" added only 28 centimeters of water to Angat, according to government data.

These were the topics of Inquirer Read-Along session held in celebration of National Nutrition Month.

A special read-along session was held at the head office of Inland Johnson in Manila City on July 10, featuring Inland Johnson's Nutritionists, Philippines president and general manager Paul Richards.

Senador's mission, on the other hand, was headlined by 2009 Miss Philippines-Fire Pa-

Party-list group bucks Comelec

By Lili E. Suterre

THE PARTYLIST group Ang Kausapgo has challenged its move and announced the Commission on Elections (Comelec) decision, displaying its intention, with known to be proven, for millions, for its being members of the marginalized sector.

Ang Kausapgo, which says it is representative of the marginalized sector, said in a statement that the Comelec could not call for representative business executives, but rather, business leaders, not of Congress because he had been proposed. Since then, he has taken his case of office as a last resort, he could only be removed by the House of Representatives (House), said the group.

"It is the House of Representatives (House) and not the Comelec which has the right and exclusive jurisdiction to pass upon the election, removal and qualifications of its members," it said, citing the Constitution.

It also stated that the Comelec had started out as a mere representative and had been involved in projects that helped protect its small- and medium-scale enterprises. However, it is willing to challenge the Comelec's ruling before the Supreme Court in order to protect the interests of the group and its constituent members, the group said.

The Comelec, in disqualifying Ramon and Eugene Lacson from being Ang Kausapgo representatives, said that the two did not belong to the marginalized sector.

It said that Ramon had once been involved with the Comelec's First Division and, a former House Divisional member, could not be considered belonging to the marginalized sector. Ramon was also involved in the controversial projects of former President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo to build bridges across the archipelago.

"The independent do not belong to the underrepresented sector that Ang Kausapgo claims to represent. It is anathema to the commission that a politician like Lacson will truly represent the plight of the marginalized sector," the Comelec's First Division said.

Ang Kausapgo was also not considered in the previous Congress when its representative turned out to be Mr. Lacson. Arroyo, the former President's daughter-in-law, The South Arroyo to the 14th Congress was not a candidate of Ang Kausapgo in the last elections.

Comelec rushing party-list canvass

THE COMMISSION on Elections (Comelec) is in a hurry to produce the canvassing winners of the May 10 party-list race.

"As on the agenda, we want to complete the party-list canvassing as soon as possible. We're rushing the race on the disqualification of members and removal of members," the Commission said. "Comelec Commission. These members said to parties, not to the members."

It said the preliminary was delayed because of the holding of special elections in several municipalities. The said members of who can be the party-list race must be determined in this world to be the basis for the number of seats awarded to the winners.

Results needed

The Comelec and it needed the results from the special elections that would be conducted in Manila which has 165 district and provincial, Lamon del Sur, 28, and Bulacan, 442. The poll body said the special elections would be held in September with no holdovers.

The poll body said there were also past experience for even selection of either district or provincial, and in two districts on the district level, of winning party-list groups and their members.

Members could be the other Comelec representatives were considered with the party-list group that had won at least one percent of the total votes cast for the party-list race, and were awarded of a seat in the House of Representatives.

"This is an important day for us and we have a lot to do in the coming days and our members have to understand the effects of the law. They want to attend (Presidential Appointments) from the 14th July 2012. They also have to pay the salaries of their staff," he said.

PORT MONOPOLY, PORT COMPETITION: Ang Tunay na Rason

New port records set by Harbour Centre

Now, why do they want to bring down the Smokey Mountain Project?

In opening this case, we look back at what we have achieved. The project gave rise to the 78-hectare Manila Harbour Centre, which hosts a multipurpose seaport, the Harbour Centre Free Terminal.

It must be known that, in the past, we offered no other port groups the management of the Manila Harbour Center's terminal. Back then, R-I Builders had no record in port operations. But there were no others.

Then, 15 years ago, Harbour Centre undertook this business by itself. And it succeeded.

Takes Harbour Centre gives what customers look for – better service at lower cost. Harbour Centre proved that it could bring down rates by as much as 10 percent. Its service and monitoring services are more efficient.

Harbour Centre cut down its land area for docking and unloading. It prevented losses and cargo pilferage because of high security levels. Customs are happy with shorter turnaround times as their reach is kept savings in both time and money.

The efficiency and productivity of our cargo handling systems automatically helped in bringing down the cost of goods and basic commodities, which benefit the Filipino in general.

Call for transparency and cooperation

We appeal to our detractors' sense of honor and duty to the country.

We call on them to squish their ego to the competition to promote all to give the best for customers. Come and openly. HEPONG ERENTI BLACK PROTAGONISM IS THE WAY OF THE COMBAT.

R-I Builders, which undertook the Smokey Mountain Project, has a record of participating in industry bodies of companies. In the sphere of housing and construction, R-I Builders led the Chamber of Real Estate and Builders' Association (CREBA) in year 2007 to 2008.

In his time as CREBA president, Regino Barrios II led the organization to unified leadership in key order around the world to spread the message that the Philippines is an attractive place to invest in.

"Other sectors of our economy have almost lost the critical spirit of competition thanks to the law. The liberalization of the telecommunications and airline industries have brought about better services at lower costs. Take the case of retail, utilities, food and consumer products, air travel and our transport, just to name a few. The port industry should only be placed among thriving industries, kept in its track by the spirit of competition," Barrios declares.

HCPTI breaking up port monopoly

Consequently, R-I Builders and Harbour Centre Port Terminal Inc. (HCPTI), including two subsidiaries Manila North Harbour Port Inc. (MNHPI), successfully breaking down their five decades of monopoly of the Philippine ports. This is the first time in the history of the Philippines that a family-owned major company against the three companies, with the MNCB being not explicitly said to be the main issue against them.

Meanwhile, the courts have spoken. From the Regional Trial Court to the Court of Appeals and all the way up to the Supreme Court, the evidence are all in favor of R-I Builders, in other words, upholding the rights of citizens and continued operations.

The Supreme Court upheld the validity, legality and constitutionality of the SMORP with a unanimous vote on Aug. 15, 2010. The Supreme Court again upheld the SMORP with a unanimous vote of 14-0 when it ruled on the Motion for Reconsideration filed by complainant Francisco Chanon.

Last August 19, a Second Motion for Reconsideration, the Supreme Court ruled with finality and affirmed the same pronouncement.

Rule of law as growth catalyst

In so doing, the courts have proven that their role is to bring the rule of law to the forefront and the future of the nation is also essentially the foundation of economic growth.

For rule of law policies, as affirmed by the courts, can become a better plan for the future and serve their roles in the country's economic growth.

Call for unity in the business community

It is in this light that R-I Builders and its subsidiaries should adhere to the law in the conduct of their businesses, and for which we call on the rest of the business community to foster and support a level playing field and a healthy competition.

Why fight and cut each other's throat when we can work together to move this country forward.

A flourishing maritime trade and port business

Let us embrace a spirit of patriotism. Let us follow the lead of our President PNo in giving the business a good, honest, and healthy law. Let us begin by demonstrating our good citizenship. Bow to the demands of the law.

Economic advancement can only thrive in a spirit of fairness that only can be guaranteed under the rule of law.

The courts have spoken enough!

Smear drive vs Smokey Mt. Project slammed

It has become obvious that some quarters are out to destroy the image of R-I Builders through the media, in the guise of public advocates of maritime organizations. Yet, the real objective is to eliminate port industry competition.

These detractors have been badly beaten in the proper forums. Now, they are desperately trying to subject R-I Builders to a trial by publicity.

Presently, the detractors question the integrity of the Smokey Mountain Development and Reclamation Project (SMORP) to malign R-I Builders and serve their selfish ends. They have even brought their lies to the Commission and may do the same later to the halls of Congress.

This heavily-funded smear campaign against the SMORP and R-I Builders surfaced after the company's business has become evident in the port business. And furthermore, its achievement is now breaking a monopoly of the industry.

The timing of this sinister campaign is highly suspicious. We are convinced that it is being waged to undermine our resolve to be a partner for development and make us look bad in the eyes of the public and policy makers.

Whichever way they bring their campaign to bring us down, we carry on. We continue to achieve what is right and legal. We proceed with our mission to give the best service to our clients in our projects.

We have battled in the arena of law. We have won. And we continue to put our trust in the rule of law.

Let the rule of law prevail!

In Pila, said the low pressure area had not yet formed into a tropical depression and that based on satellite and surface data it remained an area of low pressure over the Philippine Sea east of Central Luzon, particularly of Bako, Aurora, as of 2 p.m. Monday.

"The tropical depression and the rain was due to the rainy season," he said. He said strong winds will continue to have scattered rain showers and thunderstorms, especially in the afternoon or evening and the waves of Manila Bay will be high to moderate. Nancy Gamboa

As the paper unfolds, and a clear picture emerges, the authors also explain the deep social inequalities that exist in the United States. Inequality is not a natural condition, but a result of human decisions. Inequality is not a necessary condition for economic growth, but a result of human decisions. There is a lot of information available on the Internet. While this is a good thing, it is also a double-edged sword. The Internet is a vast source of information, but it is also a place where misinformation and disinformation can spread quickly. It is important to be critical of the information we find online and to verify it from multiple sources. This is especially true when it comes to health information, where the stakes are high. The Internet can be a valuable tool for learning about health, but it can also be a source of confusion and anxiety. We need to be able to navigate the Internet safely and effectively, and to use it to our advantage. This is a skill that is essential in the 21st century, and it is one that we need to teach our children. We need to help them understand how to find reliable information, how to evaluate it, and how to use it to make informed decisions. This is a challenge, but it is one that we must meet if we want to ensure that our children are healthy and happy in the future.

CARP is romantic but...

"LAND FOR the teacher" was the motto for the millions of people who were unhappy with President Jimmy Carter's inaugural speech which conspicuously failed to make any mention of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP), or, incidentally, to refer to the needs of these neglected elements of our society, particularly of our agricultural landless. 3-5 hectares per family to be given away to landless farmers is an ideal dream to the workers

It is absolutely true: After decades of trying to improve CMBI, almost 90 percent of our agricultural lands are now in the hands of multinationals. But should we become a victim of "the sufficiency" line business? In fact, we cannot be wealthy like U.S. imports of food. This is the biggest argument that our kind of agriculture reform is as simple as possible.

the only way to go. For this purpose, our most efficient time is brought into and under a computerized program where aptitudinal production is fully media-based or automated, as it is done in other major economies which have achieved it as by the millions of workers. How can anyone argue against the sustainable last?

Review of Trillanes court that Mr. Aquino is interfering with the judiciary.

Separation of powers

Interviewed over coffee made, Angara said MR Justice's directive would offend "fundamental principles," namely the separation of powers between the executive and the judiciary, the independence of the courts and the autonomy of the Senate.

He said dropping the complaint against Trillanes could cause a "backlash" and "boomerang" to the President.

"If there was a reintroduction of justice, let the courts rule on the matter without anyone telling them to do it because it is inherent to the judicial system," Angara said.

He said MR Justice's order should be seen as "disrupting the military court justice system."

"More important to me on the issue of Senate independence, this may not be related to the desire of the President's party to get the Senate leadership, but the timing is so close that people may suspect that this was being done so that Sen. Trillanes can vote for its candidate. That is what we're trying to avoid," Angara said.

Intensive wooing

He said the Angara said Mr. Aquino's statement was "unfortunate."

Angara, who belongs to a Senate bloc whose support he claims will determine the chamber's presidency, said that "wooing" of his group had grown intensive.

"But that is what we're trying to avoid because the Senate president is an internal affair of senators. We should not destroy our credibility and effectiveness by displaying our susceptibility to outside forces," he said.

Angara said he knew for certain that reports that Sen. Ramon "Bong" Revilla had committed support to Pangilinan were "hoaxing."

He said his bloc—which includes Sen. Villar, Loren Legarda, Juan Miguel Zubert, Lito Lapid, Marcos "Doy" Solon III and Carlos Hernandez—was likely to have a "consensus" Wednesday on whom to support.

'Every word is policy'

Angara said in a phone interview that the review order was "presidential interference on a judicial matter."

Angara belongs to Villar's bloc, whose members include Michael Defensor Santiago, Pia Cayetano, Alan Peter Geronzo and Ferdinand Marcos Jr.

Rebelling his previous statement that it would be good if Mr. Aquino stayed in office 100 days to allow free of hindering, Angara said this "intensity" does not include his enthusiasm when given from advice.

"The President's legal advisors should understand that every word of the President, be it an

In a bid to take control of the Senate, the Liberal Party (LP) has designated field Sen. Francis Pangilinan as its candidate, with the backing of Mr. Aquino.

Open fight

Despite presidential backing, Pangilinan is short of the 11 votes he needs to win a majority in the Senate. The bloc supporting him can count on no more than six votes.

Pangilinan is competing with Sen. Manuel Villar of the Nacionalista Party who himself has courted no more than four RP members.

Two possible dark horses have emerged as alternatives—Sen. Edgardo Angara, who claims to have the support of some senators, who are neither LP nor NP members, and incumbent Sen. President Juan Ponce Enrile, who is backed by at least three senators.

Trillanes, who has not been allowed by the court to attend the Senate sessions, has filed a petition with the court to grant him bail and to attend the opening session of the Senate on July 20, which will elect its new officers.

Crucial vote

Trillanes' vote will be crucial, especially for the LP bloc of Sen. Pangilinan, who is struggling.

Failure of the LP to win the Senate presidency and the majority in the chamber could be the last major endorsement for Mr. Aquino in his attempt to win the mandate to lead the Senate and the House of Representatives.

Earlier, defections from the former Lakas CMD Kampi majority appeared to have undermined the candidacy of LP Rep. Regino Sison as its pick.

Whether the coup would allow Trillanes—jailed for leading a military mutiny against the then-ruling government in Manila City on July 27, 2005—in attend the session is uncertain. A refusal could stomp the attempt by Mr. Aquino to gain supporters in both houses and to ensure passage of key measures on his legislative agenda.

Narrow and legalistic

There are doubts in legal circles over whether the justice department could legally intervene in the case's publication over the Trillanes case.

Lawyer Bernabie Balle, Trillanes' chief of staff in his Senate office, said initiatives to implement the President's statement were now in the hands of the state prosecutors.

In entering the review, Mr. Aquino gave the opinion that the law on coup d'état did not forbid release of the bond by the military rebels. He set out a narrow, technical and legalistic interpretation of the law.

According to MR Justice, "Trillanes was first incarcerated by virtue of the charge of participating in a coup. However, if informed, is a movement of policy. It cannot be individual. It cannot be classified as a personal opinion. It is a President's every word of the day," Arroyo said.

p case draws fire

He said the Tullares case was already in court and "in plain language, once the situation like a case is court... the executive should no longer interfere."

"Allowing Tullares to participate fully or partially with the former director, the wife and family is with the courts. The executive cannot interfere with that," Arroyo said, adding that this was only the demand Ponce could also not interfere because the Tullares case was a civil case.

Aquino backed

Some said that even if Tullares was allowed to attend the Senate session on July 16 and vote for Pangloss, the case would still end up in a stalemate, because he was "neutral."

The President's order for a review of Tullares' coup case, however, has won the backing of a number of the Duterte Commission, which investigated the root causes of the Galwedou mutiny.

Retired Commander Ben Babilas said Mr. Aquino's position on Tullares was not "inconsistent" with recommendations of the commission.

"There is no inconsistency here," Babilas told the business. "There should really be punishment, but it must fit the offense. The charge should not be too removed from the crime committed."

He agreed with Mr. Aquino that Tullares might have committed an offense other than coup d'etat.

"It could have been many things, short of coup d'etat," Babilas said. "The coup charge made it clear that it would not be proper. The elements of a coup were not committed by the government to protect itself."

Tullares is past military school years when the preparation was finished by then President Fidel Ramos. Babilas said the Galwedou movement was punished the most severely than they should have been.

"The punishment among them was not a question, from my point of view, it was a punishment," he said.

Palace defense

Malacañang defended Mr. Aquino's order on the Tullares case.

"That is his personal opinion," Mr. Aquino's spokesperson, Edwin Larcena, said. "There was no judgment there. We leave the decision to the appropriate officials."

Larcena said the order would cover only the charges Tullares was facing in a military court.

On the rebellion case pending in a civilian court, "we can't do anything about it," he said. "We will not interfere with its independence."

coup plot feared

you review the Revised Penal Code, there is a provision that says when a coup is committed, it says if there is a revolt, violence or attack. Then there's an exemption. The exemption does not include a leader."

Merely an opinion

Mr. Aquino made it clear he was merely expressing an opinion and that "my opinion is... the government should not have let this man go."

The case was filed in the context of the Galwedou mutiny in which the rebels seized the Malacañan and demanded the resignation of then President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo over alleged corruption. The coup collapsed after the rebels failed to muster wider public and military support.

It's unclear whether the President's opinion was well-thought-out, as he was speaking impromptu, with reporters in what appeared to be an "unbuilt" interview.

Mr. Aquino's opinion sought to make a distinction between a successful and a failed coup. It was not a balanced opinion.

It ignored the fact the waves of coups against President Diosdado Adorno between 1986 and 1990 were mostly violent attacks, and all failed. They involved attacks on the seat of government, military installations and strategic public institutions, such as telecommunications facilities—all standard targets of coups—and even banks and business centers, as in the case of the December 1989 uprising, in which there was street fighting in the Makati central business district.

Larger political objective

Under Mr. Aquino's opinion and narrow interpretation, the Galwedou mutiny did not qualify as a coup because it did not attack the seat of state power and strategic public institutions.

General business districts are economic strategic centers and attacks on them have proved to be disastrous to the economy. The President appeared to be making light of the importance of economic centers in the suppression of coups.

In dismissing the Galwedou case as lacking the requirements for a coup, Mr. Aquino ignored the findings of the Duterte Commission, which looked into the root causes of the Galwedou rebellion.

The key finding of the commission report was that the Tullares-led mutiny was "part of a larger conspiracy to grab power from Arroyo's administration."

The commission backed government intelligence reports that the Tullares group planned to seize power, restore the ousted Joseph Estrada to the presidency, and appoint a 33-member revolutionary junta.

From this perspective, Mr. Aquino's opinion appeared to be an attempt to minimize the importance of Galwedou as a strategic target of a violent attempt to seize power.

It also appears to be a whitewash of Tullares' participation in the coup and that the way for his attendance in the Senate session for a larger political objective—control of the legislative agenda by the Aquino administration.

Death toll from 'Basyang' still rising

RESCUERS retrieved three more bodies from the sea Sunday, raising the death toll from Typhoon "Basyang" to 66, but more bad weather was hampering search operations.

"Three more bodies were recovered from a rubber fishing boat," Manila Bureau chief of the Office of Civil Defense, said on radio station DZBB. "The death toll is now 66."

He said rescuers, including volunteers and troops, continued to scour coastal areas in the country's southwestern seaboard Negros, where the majority of the 64 still missing were reported.

"We are still hoping that they are still alive," Bureau said.

However, bad fresh rain brought only a few weather improvements over Saturday's punishing winds and heavy rain.

No storm

After another 24 hours, however, said it was unlikely to develop into a full-blown storm.

Strong winds lashed the country on Sunday, directly hitting Metro Manila as it was mired in the dark. Coast line with a heavily hit coastal stretch from Cebu to Iloilo.

It caused massive power outages, communication, toppled power lines, uprooted trees and damaged thousands of homes.

Boys playing football got the northeastern Chinese school of Vietnam and hurried to safety late Saturday on Saturday.

It killed at least two people in China and wrecked several Vietnamese ships off the South China Sea, officials there said.

Earlier, the Coast Guard found two more bodies of fishermen who had been declared missing in the seas of Balabac in Palau, Taiwan.

It said Oquirra, Coast Guard Laguna disaster commander who reported the retrieval operation, said the recovered bodies were dead in their underwear.

"We used all the help that we can get, volunteer divers and even oxygen tanks. We're waiting again now because the rubber boats were being pulled by strong currents towards the deeper portions of the seas," Oquirra said.

He said the rescue found the marine commercial fishing boat PB Godwin 8, 60 feet long before the storm broke.

Oquirra said officials of the Quezon provincial disaster coordinating council (PDCC) are trying to trace body tags to identify as more bodies were reported to be recovered.

Alcala vows policies, programs won't start without farmers' OK

ALCALA CITY—Agribusiness Secretary Francisco Alcala on Sunday reiterated a pledge to consult farmers and fishermen on all policies and programs of his department.

Alcala made the statement on Quezon District, Fisheries and Environmental protection when he visited his first stop in his hometown of Alcala, a two-term congressman of Quezon.

He stressed the statement on whether documents for sugar land parcels were signed last, his desk for his signature in his first day in office.

"I refused to sign the papers because I wanted to first consult all the affected sectors, the sugar farmers, millers, livestock and others," Alcala said, adding "I want to first hear their voices and opinions."

In an earlier interview, the former lawmaker said he would study all agricultural projects and programs being implemented by the department across the country.

He said the DA has been implementing the same projects and programs in all parts of the country.

"It should not be the case. Every region has its own unique natural characteristics, its own particular needs," Alcala said.

He stressed the DA will study and promote the interest of Filipinos farmers and fishermen as an important portion of his agenda in the job of rebuilding the nation.

A local Chinese group generated three local fish cancer because a "bottle light" house of nearly harvested vegetables and trees and fishy seafood from Negros they found in Manila and he found locally several areas could be strong risk.

25 Army trainees get ill; food poisoning suspected

By Eric Roman-Roa
Special Report

IBIG CITY—Twenty-five military trainees were rushed to the hospital here on Sunday due to suspected food poisoning.

The trainees of the 202nd Infantry Brigade based in this city were made sick around midnight, vomiting and diarrhea, when they were brought to the hospital morning on Sunday afternoon, said Lt. Noel Macara of the 1st Medical Hospital (CMH).

Macara said the trainees were believed to have suffered from food poisoning or gastroenteritis but this could not be confirmed until the results of laboratory tests made on the patients were released.

Lt. Jerome Manalang, the commanding officer of the 202nd IB Training Model, said those who were taken ill were among the trainees who part in a blood-draining activity on Saturday before they had lunch that consisted of chicken with spaghetti (Cremello sauce) that they themselves prepared.

By mid-afternoon of Sunday, several trainees started to have severe stomach cramps and diarrhea and by 7:30 p.m., 25 out of the 193 trainees were rushed to CMH.

Manalang said many soldiers, who suffered diarrhea, felt better after getting IV fluids.

Manalang said officials have yet to determine why only 25 got sick considering that all 193 trainees drank the same instant pot on the same food for lunch.

The soldiers were in the final week of their 12-month military training at the 202nd IB, Manalang said.

Psychologist to testify for Halili's camp

By OJ Yap

THE CAMP of sexy actress Katrina Halili will call to the stand a psychologist from the National Bureau of Investigation who examined her after videos of her sexual encounters with former celebrity doctor Hayden Kho Jr. had spread on the Internet.

Halili's lawyer, Raymond Palad, said the testimony of the psychologist would help establish the emotional stress the actress had suffered as a result of the sex videos and stress to prove that she was of sound mind.

Palad said he would present his next witness on July 20 before Judge Rodolfo Brionse of the Third Regional Trial Court Branch 154 who was hearing the case.

Psychological effect

"The want to show the psychological effect the sex videos had on Katrina," he said in the interview.

Halili had accused Kho of violating Republic Act 9262 on the Anti-Violence Against Women and Children Act when he allegedly uploaded on the Internet videos of the two of them having sex which, according to the actress, had adversely been taken without her knowledge and consent.

His videos with different women, including Halili, have circulated online and caused a scandal in show business. She claimed he had a hand in the uploading of the videos.

In September, Kho was suspended for one year by the Philippine Medical Association "for conduct unbecoming to the profession."

He is also facing a malpractice suit which was likewise filed by Halili. This is on top of the sexual harassment charges slapped against him by the NBI for videotaping his intimate encounters with the actress.

The case is still pending before the Department of Justice.

Ateneo downs
UST; La Salle
outhustles UE

By Jasmine M. Pags

FLUENT CHINA came off the bench with a brilliant game as the Ateneo Blue Eagles (15-5), to claim a share of second place in the Third UAAP men's basketball competition yesterday at the Philippine Arena in Pasig.

China posted a comeback of 17 points, 11 rebounds and four steals to lead the back-to-back champions to their second straight victory in their outings.

"Basket has a great strategy," said Ateneo coach Ramon Sison. "It's been working hard in practice. He doesn't complain if he's not playing. I just thought I'd give him a chance, and it worked out well today."

La Salle made it a three-way tie for second spot as the Green Archers defeated the University of the East Panthers, 50-43.

PAL sees clearer skies ahead as recovery holds

By Rhade S. Phorcelillo

PHILIPPINE AIRLINES (PAL) is seeing clearer skies ahead as a result of a steady albeit modest recovery in the local and international aviation markets. PAL president and chief operating officer James J. Bonifacio said the company has experienced a slight rebound, in line with the recovery of airlines around the world as a result of the improvement in global economic prospects.

The rebound improvement in the company's cash flow, Bonifacio said, helped PAL repay $40.5 million in loans that matured last month.

"We were able to pay that entire amount because we have implemented a lot of initiatives to raise cash and reduce costs," he told reporters.

"The projection of the industry is a boost in 2010 and 2011. We are seeing a confidence of the market moving toward that direction," Bonifacio said.

By the way, the Airbus A350-900 aircraft would remain on the ground due to the current challenges the local airline industry continued to face.

"We don't want to pull it in all at once. We still have a lot of problems. There is the category 2 status and the European market," he said.

There are underlying to the US Federal Aviation Authority's downgrade of the PHILIPPINE AIRLINES (PAL) plane takes off from Manila.

Philippines to category 2 status due to concerns over the country's air safety standards. The downgrade has Philippine carriers from expanding operations in the United States, which only allows PAL, being the only airline that flies to North America.

The European Union has also put the Philippines on a "blacklist" of countries whose airlines are banned from flying to the continent due to poor safety provisions.

"Although the market is improving, we still have to look for ways to cut costs and boost revenues," Bonifacio said.

That may include the company plan to reduce expenses by sub-contracting to non-core tasks, including catering and airport services, to third-party providers.

The labor department earlier asked the government to order, which will cut the number of employees, as a legal exercise of management prerogative. PAL workers have appealed the decision.

PAL posted a $10.2 million loss in the April/December period of 2009, which is the first three quarters of the company's fiscal year. Bonifacio said PAL would release its full-year financial results next month.

FirstPac raises $300M via MPIC-backed bond issue

Part of group's refinancing, debt management plan

By Dave C. Dumlao

FIRSTPACIFIC Co. Ltd. of Hong Kong, a registered company recently incorporated in the Philippines, has raised $300 million from a bond issue secured by shares of local infrastructure firms listed in the investment Corp.

In a statement issued last Friday, First Pacific said the seven-year senior guaranteed secured bonds carried a coupon rate of 7.375 percent and was double the average maturity of the company's borrowings. The new $300 million senior secured bond, a record of completion in the group's creditworthiness.

First Pacific said the new bond issue was part of the group's refinancing and overall debt management program. "The net proceeds from the bonds will be used for the repayment of borrowings. The bond issue will enable the company to accomplish a variety of goals, including diversifying its sources of funding and contributing to its debt maturity profile," it said.

The bonds are secured by shares of MPIC and subsidiaries by the local infrastructure holding and management company with assets ranging from water distribution to toll roads, electricity distribution and telecommunications.

At a fixed rate offering, the latest documents, First Pacific's corporate and risk management, including its financial risk management, to 35 percent of the total from 65 percent.

This bond offering helps First Pacific enhance its profile in the international capital markets as a strong and diversified borrower," said First Pacific managing director and chief executive officer Manuel V. Pangalanan. "It also provides us with a smoother debt maturity profile."

Golden Agrius (G) is the sole institutional and local manager while CLSA Exchange Capital Inc. and First Pacific Investment Corp. are domestic managers in the Philippines for this transaction.

First Pacific is the controlling stockholder of Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co., Manila Electric Co. and Palawan Mining Corp.

Ranked in the latest issue of capital market transactions of First Pacific since the past decade and a half. In 1997, First Pacific raised $200 million worth of convertible bonds. This was followed in 2003 with the issuance of senior bonds worth $1.5 billion and the issuance of its subordinated notes worth $150 million in 2005. All issues were endorsed, exchanged or converted when they fell due.

Toyota sales hit record high

By Miguel L. Ho

TOYOTA MOTOR Philippines Inc. (TMPI), the country's largest car maker, sold 5,096 units in June, its highest single-month sales figure so far in 2010.

According to the company, its strong performance was driven mostly by huge sales of both its passenger car and commercial vehicle offerings.

Sales of its bestselling five-seater passenger sedan reached 5,092 units in June, giving the model a 47.7 percent share of its market.

For the first semester, sales hit 8,091 units, still down of the company's 1,200-unit-a-month target for the model this year.

In an earlier interview, TMPI general manager Mariano Sugan said that even average sales of 1,000 units a month last year, sales of the Yaris could increase to 1,200 units a month this year, equaling with the launch of the Yaris 1.3-liter displacement model in April.

The latest data from TMPI showed that the company's revenue for the first semester hit 77 percent of its total projected sales for the first half.

Local flour millers buck EO on zero-tariff wheat

By Abigail L. Liu

THE PHILIPPINE Association of Flour Millers (PAFM) is opposing another extension of an executive order pegging the duty on wheat imports to zero.

In a statement issued over the weekend, the group said the government's recent extension of extending wheat prices had not been met by the previous extension of the EO.

Further extending the zero-duty regime on milling wheat, flourmills, would just result in large foreign governments increasing their market share.

Using 2009 import figures, the group said the 3.5 percent import duty on milling wheat is in place, the government would have generated about P1 billion in revenue.

"Collecting this amount can help reduce the budget deficit and allow the government some leeway in implementing programs that directly benefit the citizenry," the group said.

PAFM called on the government to extend to the 3 percent import regime instead of "zero-duty" taxing regime on anything that would not be subject to primary objectives. "We will have supported in the last 11 months."

"When the government is forced to lift the zero-tariff wheat imports, it had the least desirable of lowering the price of bread to benefit the consumers. In fact, however, this objective can be achieved on a long-term basis, but at a price," the group said.

During Department of Trade and Industry records, PAFM said that while the cost price of flour had dropped to P146.77 in per 25 kilograms, the price of a 500-gram bag had risen to approximately P55.50.

The price was even higher than the P50 per bag recorded in May 2008 when the ex-manufacturer flour was at P50.00 per bag, the group added.

"The PAFM would surely have been in a position to pay for the cost of flour, but at a price beyond the reach of ordinary consumers. While flour prices have gone down, bread prices remained high," it further said.

Meanwhile, around EO 765 in November 2008, stating that to be a tariff, wheat and flour should impose taxes from previous years.

When the six-month regime ended in July last year, the President Aquino issued EO 738, stating for another six months the duty-free importation of milling wheat.

Pag-IBIG eyes retail bond issuance worth P3B in '11

By Rosalyn W. Dominguez

THE HOME Development Mutual Fund is considering the issuance in 2011 of at least P3 billion worth of retail bonds to address demand for savings packages among investors in the country, according to the state agency.

Officials of the HDMF, which is also known as Pag-IBIG Fund, but not yet official, said this year on a series of "bonding talks" to coordinate and brainstorm where there were suitable P3-billion amounts including Singapore, Hong Kong and some other in Europe.

James Lindenberg, Pag-IBIG deputy chief executive, said the agency had shared that there was a "vision" for a savings program that would allow OFWs to save in the Fund, especially those with high net worth.

Some sources said OFWs who had paid

Move aimed at meeting demand from OFWs

The fund had been planning for some time to launch a retail bond program to provide a larger amount of money to Pag-IBIG funds from the investment community.

This way, they get returns on their savings and, at the same time, provide part in the country's banking program," he said.

"We are looking at an issue of at least P1 billion but it could be higher depending on the demand," he said.

He explained that the plan was to issue retail bonds in a new manner for Pag-IBIG, with previous funds already done in 2007 and 2008. Each month P3 billion.

The official said the 2011 bonds would be free of tax, with a term of five years and yield of 5 percent. The same interest rate for the 2008 term bonds.

Also, PAFM said a special feature of the retail bonds issued by government was a right where every P1,000 worth of investment in the housing bond would entitle the bondholder to a chance to win a house and to work P1 million.

"This is a feature that we want to include in the proposed savings program," he said.

Funds said the borrowing would be used to fund the government's social housing program for 2011.

Pag-IBIG bonds to repay in 2011 P3 billion worth of bonds and month of each month P3 billion in 2011. The amount represents the year's debt but is issued last year respectively.

Expansion of rubber production pushed

By Rhea T. Ochoyano

THE DEPARTMENT of Agriculture's high value commercial export program (HCEP) seeks to expand rubber production and increase foreign revenues by opening up new areas in Palawan.

HCEP program director Isabel Espino said reports that the department was targeting a 5 percent growth in production to keep up with local and global demand. Espino said the department was looking at additional 20,000 to 30,000 hectares of prospective rubber.

A plantation of that size is the size of one large investor who can spend P2,000 to P3,000 per hectare for a complete production cycle—from planting rubber to processing the sap into rubber sheets, he said.

The department produced 407,440 metric tons of rubber in 2009, down 0.61 percent from 411,247 tons in 2008. This led to a 1.72 percent increase between the 2008 output and the 2010 output in 2007.

The DA attributed the decrease in rubber production to 2009 to softening demand and drop in prices in the world market. Globally, analysts said that the demand for rubber was in the manufacturing industry.

The low demand resulted in lower tapping interest in Agri and Agri, Comptroller of the Treasury and the Department of Agriculture.

There were also reports of lower rate of installation of rubber farms in Zamboanga del Sur and a reduced number of saplings were used in Zamboanga del Sur.

In terms of planted area, some 120,000 hectares were planted to rubber in 2009, up from 112,000 in 2008 and 111,000 in 2007. The department is expected to push up again as demand remains in rubber coating and of footwear.

Charice 'flattered' by comparisons to Lea Salonga

IT WAS such a delight to interview Charice Pempengwa for my "Hello Dolly" segment in "PopScene." She has no idea at all, which makes me wonder why some quarters insist she has become much louder. The words were gentler and her smile made me feel instantly at home.

Now it's time preparing for "Diva." "I will take lessons from a vocal coach to improve my range," she said. "I can't wait to meet the cast, especially my mom, Karla Mendoza, who portrays Julia."

How does she feel that she's called the Lea Salonga of her generation? "It is flattered," she beamed. "But instead of being daunted, I'm like, 'I'm not going to let you down, Mom!'"

Is there anything that the "Most Tolerant Girl in the World" cannot do? "I still need to polish my singing," she said. "Diva" will give me a chance to do that.

Widespread Singing Power?
Separation confirmed
I wrote about the separation of William Hart and Faye Aguilera many columns ago, but it's only now that they finally admitted it.

"We live in separate houses but neighborly," she revealed. "We see each other every day because we don't want our kids to have a hard time adjusting. William and I grew together but he was not here to grow as individuals. We are not doing the same, though, but I'm not ready to get into another relationship. I can no longer be a wife but I will be a mother."

Was raised the girl that over William finds another girl, she would prefer not because we're good friends but William was my

Euphoric Angel
Angel Aquino is euphoric that "Magkikita" is landing. It's even the reason she's emotionally distancing to play her character.

"It's heavy," she said. "That's why I do other things. It's a relief to be a person, though, because it's a release of pain-up emotions rather than portraying a dramatic role where I have to cry."

Isn't she wary of dealing with the ever-hungry Elizabeth Ruffalo? "I have no problem with Greta," she said. "But I don't want to comment on the issues the press involved in."

The segment's name only brings up her name. She's Angelic, indeed.

John Woo in Manila
International market star John Woo is coming to Manila on July 20 to promote his much-awaited movie "Yellow" for his Pinoy fans. He plays the lead role of Jojo Manzano in the movie adaptation of the widely popular video game "White Line," he will be gunning to secure the most of the prize and grace the international premiere of "Yellow." This one leads away, John!

The evolution of Paella

Paella, an original Spanish recipe, is one of the most popular rice dishes in the world. The word "paella" comes from the name of the Spanish pan in which it is cooked. It is a dish that has evolved over the years, from a simple rice dish to a complex meal. The original paella was a simple dish of rice, beans, and vegetables, but it has since evolved into a variety of different dishes. Today, paella is a popular dish in many parts of the world, and it is often served at special occasions.

The truth about 'Cats' . . .

from up because we were jumping back in Manila and was had a more pressing problem. The studio's deadline for my debut was not negotiable, so I had to go.

So you're probably fine with the Catwinkle costume for the first time?

What was it like wearing the Catwinkle costume for the first time?

Well, when I had my first costume fitting, without the wig and makeup, it was okay. But when I had the full setup on, every time I passed by a mirror, I'd be like, "Oh my God!" It doesn't look strange from the backside and in person, it looks fine.

What was your daughter Marlene's reaction upon seeing your "Cat" makeover?

My daughter was the whole reason. She was like when she heard I was coming under the makeup, she wanted to go the other way, so, she has her own little things and feelings.

There's a "Glee" comparison on Facebook...

I know. For now it is funny. It's great. But I think that there's a group of fans that have made it their mission to put me on "Glee."

Elaine is becoming close-minded but I don't want to do it ultimately. I'm not even in the right place.

How you view "Glee"?

My God! I love all the episodes on there!

Charlie Sheen once said he is on a team.

That's correct.

There was talk on "The Star" that you'd play her soon.

I consider it, but I haven't been asked. I don't know how the writers group was started. It's interesting already. I wouldn't want to be or do anything that would jeopardize my chance of being in that show someday.

There's also a film version of "Miss Saigon" under "Freemove" director Lee-Hoang?

Finally they are going to do it. It requires a special director with a lot of intelligence, someone who will treat every intensity actor and music director's desire to that musical with respect and dignity. It's not just the woman in the show as a musician, but that would be ideal. It's not more honorable to dig deeper and make those artists three-dimensional and whole.

Our stage director Marlene Hizon was the first. He was not.

How you have added to be part of the music?

Not having it. I'm not going to be silent.

How about the other roles, then on stage?

I think they'll play an American. American to play like. It's not really up to me. As the Glee CD probably has to be 250,000 to make a billion would really make me do that.

I get to play like, and on, for 18 years. This was a pleasure.

Will another Philippine play like? It's not anybody. They would want to have to score and search for the right person. And I think it would be worth the effort, to find that special young woman who is charming and beautiful and sings like cats.

What's your advice to the girl who'll play her?

Don't take it too seriously. Make that mistake.

It's a risk, don't make it your life.

Enjoy the process, enjoy the people, enjoy the music. It's beautiful stuff.

Full in love with your surroundings. Take lots of pictures. All the makeup makes, your clothes, the set. Those are precious.

Keep a journal. If there's any personal favorite you are working with, get their autograph. Take a picture with them.

Did you get an autograph of Jonathan Pryor (who played the engineer on "Miss Saigon")?

Yeah, I worked with him every day. I was double (sly).

But then he played, Juan Ponce to Marlene's "Glee"?

I had it once!

What's your take on the popularity of musicals?

I'm happy that it shows the "Glee" was TV. It makes a large portion of the population interested in musicals and musical theater. When people are now acquainted with the art and how wonderful it is.

I love Chris Geller, when he sang "Don't Stop Believin'" on "Glee." It's so beautiful. I'll be watching the next play. There's a lot. He was so good about the other performance being better, but he was so wonderful. Singing and acting like a Hollywood star.

That's my definition "Glee" means.

What memory would you take home "Glee"?

And because intense physical pain that I would not experience ever.

The people. It was with me and how wonderful they all are. And of having shared such a special moment and trying to do it. And seeing how hard he pushed his skills, as an actor, in playing something like this.

The song is iconic and there isn't much I can do about that. All I can do is be the best that I can.

How does it live in her back in Manila or Cebu? Marlene's choice?

It's like the "Heart California," you can check out any time, you want, but you can't ever leave.

The musical theater world is like everything else.

The truth about 'Cats'...

It's almost impossible to be that about it. Everyone knows everybody. When someone starts having a relationship with somebody, it's done. That's just wrong!

What's your take on really showing? Even though you're a product of a really show. Don't you wish everyone took the musical theater path instead?

The rehearsal, I have nothing against singing competition. The real is the first one just as much. When it comes, that's hard and I don't think I can do it. I'd rather have the show. (Garcia laughs) Instead of Repertory Theater, it's a show.

But there are shows, like "The Big Fish" that seem to be a bit back to home. If you can get home the quickly it could happen just as quickly.

Are the really show graduates prepared for home?

I guess. After having these shows, when someone happens, you feel that they really worked for it and, in many ways, it's not it. It happens quickly. I'm not so sure.

Some of them might be better equipped than others. While some of them might not be able to sing, because this is a very strong, subtle and somewhat of a show.

Everyone will accept about your body but everyone will have an opinion. If you are not strong enough, you might not make it.

There are still lots of things that you can do. "Freaky" "Wicked"?

"Oh, this is going to get me there before I turn 45. I want to be like Marlon Brando when I grow up. The look, the way."

Do you want to direct the musical?

I don't have the credibility of a director. I have the credibility of a coach, though. Marlon has given me advice to coach in the past. It's hard to take a good opinion.

I can't direct because you have to think about lighting, sound, choreography, the actors. I'd want to be a director. I'd want to be a director. I'd want to be a director, within the passion, within the passion, within the passion, within the passion.

What's hot, what's not in college course choices

By Chelsa Basal-Fernando
Learning Editor

WHETHER the economy is on a downturn, as it has been worldwide in the past two years, people begin to realize that some jobs are more desirable than others because they are more stable.

Recent surveys conducted by pollsters have shown that prospective students have focused on that, as this pressure, job security is a more important criterion in course selection.

Global labor statistics and employment projections indicate that some careers have withstood the test of both time and recession. (See table.) These long-standing occupations, it turns out, are in the fields of education—teachers in all levels and graduate researchers continue to be in demand—as well as healthcare, which means doctors, surgeons, pharmacists, dentists and dental hygienists, therapists and, of course, of course, nurses.

But information technology remains the hottest area for freshmeats, who will keep hogging the software engineers, systems managers, database administrators and the like. In the United States, the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), according to the state global labor survey, notes 31.7 million are looking for higher salaries, with zero loss.

Because of the latter-day rise of the environment and funding gaps in the United States, however, bioresources have become an important financial element, environmental scientists, forest rangers and forest managers but, in the near future, the growing demand will have a healthy demand for their services in Canada, Australia and Singapore. (See table.)

What to major in
So what college degrees offer excellent payoffs, given these prospects in the global job market?

Consistent in the medical and allied disciplines as well as in health and restaurant management (BHM) who finds demand in the most popular programs in the country.

choices at De La Salle College of Saint Benilde. At University of the East, however, chemistry takes the cake.

This choice of learning is consistent with the Commission on Higher Education (CHED) projections for 2030 where the medical and allied disciplines are the top 1, with a projected increase from 307,253 to 776,778 students or 46.21 percent.

Here in the latest available actual data from CHED, the course with the most number of students in the school year 2009-2010 was nursing, with 499,792 students, 1.6M more for medical with 360,765 students.

Medical courses are for a large 79.22 percent of the total enrollment in the health-care programs for school year 2009-2010.

In other spots of 87-year-olds, school year 1999-2000, the rate of increase in enrollment in the medical and allied disciplines was 24.0 percent. Thus, from 150,634 in school year 1999-2000, the enrollment in the said disciplines across then tripled to 517,253 in school year 2009-2010.

Lowly sectors will remain negligible in the United States, the United Kingdom,

Canada and Australia, according to labor statistics. But for the BHM program, it was always popular in culinary and food preparation students in Canada where skilled independent chefs high at desirable employment. The other teachers for BHM graduates are cruise ships and the numerous hotel resorts distributed throughout the world.

Info-tech numbers
The students who in 2008-2009 were among the 142,011 enrollees in information technology (IT), the NO.1 in computer science and the 45,831 in electronics and communications engineering have better opportunities in the global market than others does IT-related occupations are expected to keep growing in the coming years.

There has also been a notable rise in local enrollment in IT, a 47.46 percent increase in the decade from 1999 to 2009.

CHED, however, has projected a decrease of 30,449 to 11 enrollees.

Those who in 2008-2009 took up information technology (86,587) and accountancy (86,364) must be doing so bad in the near future because careers and accountants are on the most wanted list, jobs that are in. Teacher training enrollment, however, has slipped to the last 19 years by 127,253 (26.40 percent), which explains the chronic shortage of teachers in the country.

The sad news is that projections by CHED indicate that teacher education enrollment will go down again by 33,831.

Up, down in a decade

Other disciplines that have registered steady increase in enrollment in the past 10 years include business administration (BA) and related programs (18,430 or 2.91 percent), arts and letters (11,041 or 1.66-57 percent), social and behavioral sciences (10,922 or 17.38 percent), management (9,899 or 15.32 percent), law and applied arts (11,321 or 19.04 percent). The disciplines that have posted decrease in enrollment in the past 10 years are law and jurisprudence (806 or -4.01 percent), religious and theology (2,022 or -28.11 percent), mathematics (1,293 or -21.23 percent), architecture and town planning (1,208 or -19.60 percent), natural science (8,213 or -21.54 percent), mass communication (1,431 or -10.86 percent), engineering and technology (11,819 or -1.36 percent), agriculture, forestry, fisheries, veterinary medicine (21,091 or -20.73 percent) and medicine (80,882 or -30.94 percent).

Projected rise, fall
Other discipline groups projected by CHED to have an increase in enrollment are made, craft and industrial (15,232), locomotive (763) and fine and applied arts (770).

Those that are expected to see a drop in enrollment in the CHED projections include BA and related courses (15,254), engineering and technology (128,945), agriculture, forestry, fisheries, veterinary (14,616), art and design (13,052), marine (11,411), social and behavioral sciences (12,381), natural science (12,553), architectural and town planning (1,281), law and jurisprudence (1,574), mass communication and dissemination (1,256), service studies (1,408) and religion and theology (1,446). With a report from Inquirer Research.
